

(11)

while after this dear little Girl was carried to School by her Maid, (for she loved to learn to read a Book as good Children do) and as they were going along, they met a poor Man, who complained that he was hungry; her Maid was frightened, she knew him; he was her Countryman, and had been her Father's Master, but the Maid had no Money in her Pocket. The Miss gave him all her's, and ask'd him what Trade he was; the Maid told her he was a Farmer, and made the Corn grow. Ay, said the Miss, and do you get the Bread and Pudding out of the Ground for other Folks, and they be so hard-hearted as to give you nothing to eat? A little while after when the School was done, as the Miss was not at School, she used to go home with her, Miss Nancy thought she could go home by herself, but was halted out of the Door, when she saw a mad Dog running to bite her; she was sadly frightened, and ran away back again as fast as she could. The Dog ran after her, and would certainly have hurt her, if the poor Man, she had been given a Penny to, had not run and knocked down the Dog, and sav'd her.

True Friends are, the whole World to us;
another; and he that is a Friend to him is also a Friend to Mankind, There's